Elena Fucci, Titolo 2013 Aglianico del Vulture

Score 17/20

Soil is different layers of lava, ash and clay, known as pozzolana. 'Stratification avoids hydric stress in the summer as the water seeps through the layers of lava and ash and remains trapped in the layers of clay. Fermented in steel over 10-12 days, malo in barrique. 12 months in French barriques (1st and 2nd use) and then 12 months in bottle. pH 3.35, TA 5.99 g/l, RS 3.3 g/l.

Deep cherry red, intense black-cherry fruit on the nose - really generous and deep and just a hint of smoky reduction. Dry, chalky tannins. Deep and long and still needs time. (JH)

14 to 15 days on the skins. 'Non mi piace la macerazione spinta', says winemaker Elena (I don't like skin maceration pushed to the extreme). So this only stays on the skins for as long as the alcoholic fermentation lasts.

Mid ruby. Classic Aglianico nose with wonderful racy, dark fruit on the palate with bags of coating tannins. It all strikes a great balance. Apparently this is aged in 50% new barrique, but hardly noticeable. (WS)

Elena Fucci, Titolo 2015 Aglianico del Vulture

Score 17/20

Youthful ruby. A tiny bit reductive on the nose and firmer than 2014, with bags of blackberry fruit with a hint of liquorice and garden herbs. Lovely supple fruit and succulence, but not ready by a long shot. (WS)

From magnum. Lustrous mid ruby. Cherry-laced palate with savoury, exotic, spice notes and liquorice. Gorgeous freshness and bite and length. Wonderful vibrant stuff. (WS)
